READING COMPREHENSION

Read the texts below and choose the best answer, A, B, C or D.

I. The Taj Mahal

The Taj Mahal has a great deal to live up to. So much, indeed, that there can be few thoughtful visitors today who, knowing something of its reputation, do not fear the betrayal of expectation. How can anything justify the rhapsodies, the descriptions, the history, the legends, the very photographs? I confirm that it was in such a spirit, almost with fingers crossed behind my back, that I paid my two rupees, passed through the outer arch, and approached the inner, which serves, when you have advanced to the right point, as a frame for the picture before you. They told me that the Taj Mahal is beautiful, and they were right. They also told me that it is white, though here they were wrong, for white is almost the only colour it is not, except for a few minutes immediately after the sun goes down; at that point all the delicate blues and greys and yellows and pinks are drawn from it and leave it like a ghost, until it takes on its evening life and becomes as rich as the moon.

1 What does the writer say about the Taj Mahal?

- A He believed it would surpass his expectations. C It is at its best just after sunset.
B He had been misinformed about it. D Its charms had been exaggerated.

2 In describing the Taj Mahal, the writer's tone is

- A lyrical. B critical. C ironic. D sentimental.

3 'to live up to' in line one means:

- A a lot of events taking place there. B to offer what people expect of it.
C rich history. D to do to meet visitors' expectations.

II. A Magnificent Failure

Peter Calthorpe invited me to lunch. Together with architect-planners like Andres Duany and Elizabeth Plater-Zyberk, Calthorpe is a founder and passionate advocate of the so-called 'New Urbanism': a search for a return to traditional urban forms and traditional ways of urban life. His most ambitious plan, and the one most often quoted, was for Laguna West, south of Sacramento. Over coffee, he bewailed what had happened to it. During the grim California recession in the early 1990s, the original developer went bust and the entire scheme was taken over by another less visionary one, who completed it in contravention of every New Urbanist principle. Don't go and see it, Calthorpe begged.

I pondered, and finally failed to take his advice – but I was glad I went. The fact is that Laguna West is a catastrophic failure, but a magnificent one, even tragic in the strict sense of that overworked word. For it was an extraordinary concept. Had it been completed as Calthorpe planned it, it would have been one of the great visionary new towns of the 20th century. However, as things have turned out, Laguna West is just another conventional, car-dependent suburb. Only once did I see any evidence of public transport – one solitary bus shelter (later interrogation of the Sacramento transit website revealed a mere four buses out in the morning, four back at night.).

4. Why is Peter Calthorpe unhappy with the outcome of Laguna West?

- A The project has suffered due to circumstances beyond his control.
B His traditional ideas have proved unpopular with residents there.
C The area has been criticised for its lack of transport provision.
D His fellow-architects have failed to support his basic principles.

5. Which word (bolded in the text) is used by the writer to reinforce an earlier statement?

- A so-called B grim C overworked D mere

III. Shaking hands

Is your grip limp or clammy or pulverising and purposeful? Is it accompanied by a vigorous shake or minimal movement? And how long can you keep it going?

Psychologists have concluded that your handshake does indeed reveal the truth about your personality. To the delight of business trainers who have long been urging us to get a grip, a firm handshake seems, well, unshakeably linked to a good first impression. And that first impression is more likely than not to be borne out of personality tests. A team led by an American professor shook the hands of 112 people who did not realise that their greeting was under scrutiny. This was not any old team, but fully trained professionals, schooled in handshaking for months before being let loose on the unsuspecting volunteers. Men's handshakes were found to be generally firmer than women's, and people offering a strong, active, dry handshake together with direct eye contact left an impression of being more expressive and assertive than those with weaker grips.

The only trait that proved expectation wrong was the finding that men who were more open and liberal tended to have weaker handshakes and so left a lukewarm first impression. Women on the other hand who were more liberal and intellectual tended to have a firmer handshake and therefore were more likely to create a good first impression.

6. In introducing the subject of shaking hands, the writer's tone is

- A suspicious. B humorous. C disapproving. D disrespectful.

7. What are we told about shaking hands?

- A Practice is important to making a good impression.
B Clever women make a better first impression than clever men.
C It is not a reliable guide to personality.
D Tolerant and broad-minded men are apt to have an unsatisfactory handshake.

8. 'let loose on' (bolded in the text) means:

- A let uncontrolled B let one by one C allowed to deal with D refused by

IV. New York

I'm perfectly happy to be impressed by New York, but like any other first-time visitor who doesn't have a Venusian passport I can't help but arrive with a record of previous convictions gained from a million TV cop shows, Batman comics, magazines, novels, films, plays and songs. As soon as I arrive, I set out to find the Empire State Building. Suddenly there it is in front of me, disappearing miles up into the sky. It is some sight. I buy a ticket and head for the 86th floor in a lift that goes so fast the passengers have no time to get embarrassed with each others' company. From the top I can see the Chrysler building, the General Electric building and thousands of other buildings I don't know the names of yet, and far below the streets jammed with little winking toy yellow cabs pointlessly swinging out from one slow lane to the next. Over there is the Hudson, the East river, Central Park to the north, the Statue of Liberty, copper green against the bay, welcoming huddled masses on tiny tour boats. I remember someone in my guidebook saying that New York seems like chaos, but to me, from the air, it's a work of art.

9. What point is the writer making at the beginning of the paragraph on New York?

- A It's good to visit somewhere new.
B New York is not as dangerous as people think.
C It's difficult not to have preconceived ideas about New York.
D Tourists should find out as much as possible in advance.

10. What aspect of the traffic in New York strikes the writer most forcibly?

- A the poor public transport system C the low driving standards
B the width of the streets D the number of taxis

This is the end of the Test.
